What are ways the United States can increase participation in national, public, and military service? Is the military draft or draft contingency still a necessary component of U.S. national security? These are just two of the questions the National Commission on Military, National, and Public Service is currently seeking answers to. If you have ideas and thoughts on these questions, then make sure your voice is heard and join us for a session that will include an overview of the commission and a discussion on ways to increase the desire of all Americans—particularly young Americans—to serve, and thoughts on the current and future state of the military selective service process. RSVP is encouraged, but not required. Interested participants should RSVP to Morgan Levey at Morgan.N.Levey@inspire2serve.gov.
