End Selective Service registration!

Tell Congress to end draft registration, not expand it to women:

- Repeal Presidential authority to order registration.
- Repeal all Federal sanctions for nonregistration.
- Preempt all state sanctions for nonregistration.
- Abolish the Selective Service System

In 2016 and again in 2021, Congress came close to approving legislation to expand the requirement to register with the Selective Service System for a possible military draft to include young women as well as young men. In 2016 and again in 2021, the expansion of draft registration was included in the annual military budget bill, but was removed only in the final House-Senate negotiations. By burying this legislation in a 3,000-page bill with hundreds of other provisions, Congress has avoided any floor vote or hearings on the continuation or expansion of draft registration.

Why are we talking about expanding draft registration to women, rather than ending it?

The choice is not between continuing male-only draft registration and expanding draft registration to women. The real choice is whether to expand registration to women or to end it entirely.

This is a choice about militarism, not about gender equality. Expanding draft registration to women would bring about a semblance of equality in war (although women in the military would likely still be subject to greater sexual harassment and abuse). Ending draft registration would bring about real equality in peace and freedom. It would put an end to the fantasy that the draft is always available as a “fallback” option if the military runs short of troops – a myth that enables planning for larger, longer, less popular wars without concern for whether people will volunteer to fight them.

Draft boards have been appointed and trained throughout the U.S. The Selective Service System maintains contingency plans for both a general "cannon fodder" draft of young men (based on the current list of registrants) and a separate “Health Care Personnel Delivery System”.

All male U.S. residents are required to register with the Selective Service System when they turn 18, and notify Selective Service every time they change their address until their 26th birthday.

Few young men comply fully with the Selective Service law. Most men who register for the draft do so only if and when it is required for some other government program, and almost nobody tells the Selective Service System when they move. Most draft notices would be returned as undeliverable. Even the former Director of the Selective Service System has testified that the current Selective Service database is so incomplete and inaccurate that it would be “less than useless” for an actual draft.
Will draft registration and planning for a military draft continue?

Will women be required to register for a military draft?

On December 6, 2021, the expansion of draft registration to women was removed from this year’s National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) during House-Senate negotiations.

But the expansion of draft registration is likely to be considered again by Congress in 2022 or 2023. It’s a bad idea that won’t go away until Congress ends draft registration entirely.

Sooner or later, the failure of draft registration will become too widely recognized for the government to ignore. At that point, the government will have to decide whether to try again to prosecute a handful of nonregistrants in the hope that a few “show trials” will scare everyone else into registering (as it tried to do, unsuccessfully, with a few young men in the 1980s, before abandoning enforcement of the registration law in 1988), or finally admit failure and end draft registration.

Our actions now in lobbying for an end to draft registration and repeal of the Military Selective Service Act, organizing against the draft and draft registration, supporting resistance to draft registration, and calling public attention to the extent of noncompliance with draft registration can help make the difference in whether draft registration is ended soon, or whether another generation of young people – this time including young women as well as young men – is subjected both to the requirement to register for the draft and to a new threat of prosecution of a selected few if they do not.

Congress could end draft registration entirely, rather than trying to extend it to women. A bipartisan “Selective Service Repeal Act of 2021” (H.R. 2509 / S. 1139) is pending in both the House and the Senate. This bill is our best chance in decades to put an end to plans and preparations for a draft, and to restore the eligibility of men who didn't register for the draft for government jobs, naturalized citizenship, and other government programs from which they are currently excluded. But if we don’t speak up now, draft registration will be probably be expanded to women as well as men.

The perception that the draft is always available as a “fallback” enables planning for larger, longer, less popular wars, without regard for whether people will volunteer to fight them. By preventing a draft, draft registration resisters are helping to protect us all against war. We can support them by asking our Representatives and Senators to support the Selective Service Repeal Act.

Members of Congress need to hear from everyone who opposes the draft. Co-sponsors of the Selective Service Repeal Act of 2021 include civil libertarians and progressives, women of color (Rep. Ilhan Omar, D-MI, and Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton, D-DC), the co-chair of the Congressional LGBT Equality Caucus (Rep. Mark Pocan, D-WI), and a woman military veteran (Rep. Mariannette Miller-Meeks, R-IA). Ask your Representative and Senators to join them as co-sponsors, and urge House and Senate Armed Services Committee members to push for hearings on Selective Service repeal.

➔ Support the “Selective Service Repeal Act of 2021” (H.R. 2509 / S. 1139).
➔ Oppose new or expanded state laws linking drivers’ licenses to draft registration.
➔ Don’t register for the draft. Speak out about your refusal to register.
➔ Be an ally to young people in their resistance to draft registration.
➔ Educate, agitate, and organize against the draft and draft registration.

For more about the draft, draft registration, and draft resistance, scan the code at the right with your phone, or see: www.resisters.info